More of a long Advertisement

I've listened to ten episodes, after hearing the host Mark interviewed on a distinguished podcast. This podcast serves primarily to sell/promote their online products. The products are the "investors toolkit", which to make any sense you then are advised to purchase their "basic" coaching, in which you're told a "few" of the "secrets", but you're still struggling and the answer is to then buy the 'elite coaching'. And even then, to the host and his co-hosts own admittance, they hold back some of the "secrets" that have made them successful.

Pros: Interesting guest every once in awhile.

Cons: Biggest was a large waste of my time.

Works poorly

Every time I open the app, it spends a lot of time and data downloading the same 10 podcasts that were ready when I first installed the app. Over and over I mark them as played, only to have them return each time I start the program. It does the same thing on the built-in version for newer phones, but I hoped this glitch wasn't on the app. It makes it completely unusable. I'm about to delete it and try a competitor.

I love it

I love listening to joe santagato, shane dawson and rhett and link its the best way to keep up with their everyday lives 🍷❤️😊

This podcast very much reminds me of the old-school gambling radio shows, where its pre-recorded and if you wanted their "locks" of the week(for betting), you'd just need to pay them a fee to get their insight. Same business model, but with land.

If this subject interest you, find an expert who has written books on the subject, instead of one who makes all his money from never-ending "levels" of premium priced coaching.

Interestingly, when you do get to the ultra pricey 'elite' coaching... your craigslist posting somehow starts to get offers. I'm not mad at their scheme, but people need to be aware. Thanks.
