OUR PROCESS

Traditional, bottom-up research paired with a growth thesis based on climate, resource, and demographic trends – because a rapidly evolving economy requires an equally adaptive approach to investing. We follow science and innovation, not the crowd.

Time and again, history has demonstrated that extreme levels of inequality can undermine a civilization's ability to thrive. Today, the United States faces extreme levels of inequality that pose clear threats. A far more sustainable and equitable society is not only possible—it presents enormous opportunity. Investing In The Next Economy (Wp-Content/Uploads/2017/06/Green-Alpha-Next-Economics-White-Paper-20170628.Pdf)

As economic and environmental risks materialize, innovative companies addressing systemic risks are leading long-term economic growth. By directing capital to solutions creators, investors can catalyze and gain from the highly efficient, sustainable Next Economy. Electrifying Portfolios (/Wp-Content/Uploads/2018/02/Green-Alpha-Electrifying-Portfolios-White-Paper-20180221.Pdf)

In a world where fossil fuels are losing market share to efficient, technology-leveraged renewable energies, a prudent investor should consider carefully whether fossil fuel companies are a reasonably likely source of risk-adjusted returns. Shock and Awe

"2.6 billion people or 39 percent of the world's population live without access to improved sanitation."
