Businesses Serving Washington, D.C. Hit with Baseball Fee

June 6, 2019

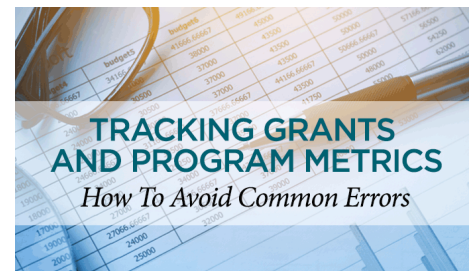

Washington, D.C. officials helped bring baseball back to the nation's capital in 2008 by establishing a Baseball Fee. Initially, only businesses with a physical connection to the district had to pay the fee. However, businesses now have to pay it if revenues from services were delivered to customers located there, regardless of where the service was actually performed.

Contractors Prove Their Business Systems to Defense Department

May 21, 2019

Contractors or subcontractors that have never had an audit performed by DCAA, or have made changes to their accounting and estimating systems and processes, should be proactive and have self-assessment/mock-reviews of each performed in advance of a DCAA audit. Are you ready?

Tracking Not-for-Profit Grants and Program Metrics

May 5, 2019

Not properly tracking grants and program metrics daily and waiting too late to record them are all too common mistakes not-for-profits make. The good news is there are options available to tackle this problem. Many not-for-profit organizations are relying on outsourced accounting methods to help ensure nothing gets missed or delayed.
