Multi-Sector Absolute Return

Search for Yield in a Low Interest Rate Environment

Institutional investors around the globe are challenged to find income to reach investment and spending targets, without taking on undue risk. Our Multi-Sector Absolute Return Strategy is an actively managed response for investing in a low yield environment.

The strategy allows us the flexibility to actively use and rotate among fixed income sectors (including U.S. investment grade, high yield bond, leveraged loans and non-U.S. bonds), taking advantage of relative value to enhance portfolio yield, while avoiding risks associated with using only one sector. The allocation decision and Investment Risks: Bonds offer a relatively stable level of income, although bond prices will fluctuate providing the potential for principal gain or loss. Intermediate-term, higher-quality bonds generally offer less risk than longer-term bonds and a lower rate of return. Generally, a strategy's fixed income securities will decrease in value if interest rates rise and vice versa. Although a strategy's yield may be higher than that of fixed income strategies that purchase higher-rated securities, the potentially higher yield is a function of the greater risk that the fund's share price will decline. Mortgage-backed investments involve risk of loss due to prepayments and, like any bond, due to default. Because of the sensitivity of mortgage-related securities to changes in interest rates, a strategy's performance may be more volatile than if it did not hold these securities. U.S. Government guarantees apply only to the underlying securities of a strategy's portfolio and not the strategy's shares. Floating rate loans are typically senior and secured, in contrast to other below investment grade securities. However, there is no guarantee that the value of the collateral will not decline, causing a loan to be substantially unsecured. Loans generally are subject to restrictions on resale. Certain types of loans may limit the ability of a strategy to enforce its rights and may involve assuming additional credit risks. The geographical concentration of portfolio holdings in a strategy may involve increased risk. A strategy's income may be subject to certain state and local taxes and, depending on your tax status, the federal alternative minimum tax.
