There's a difference between living and living well.

Living well should always be the goal, because you deserve so much more than just living.

Whether that means ordering the good white burgundy when you're out with friends, taking your college-age kids to Tuscany, doubling up on yoga classes, or just having the housekeeper an extra day a week, being able to treat yourself makes things easier. Especially after a major life transition like divorce, losing a spouse, or entering retirement.

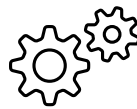

Here's the problem: even if you have a nice cushion right now, it's easy to blow through everything in the blink of an eye.

Will you have enough?
