A Scientific Approach to Investment Management

At Mercer Advisors, our investment philosophy is guided by scientific reasoning and theory; not subjectivity and speculation. As fiduciaries to our clients, we recommend only those investment solutions which we believe to be the best available. Our science-based approach to investing focuses on identifying those characteristics of investments that have been shown, over time, to be reliable predictors of superior, risk-adjusted returns. While this factor-based approach doesn't guarantee that such investments will deliver positive future returns, decades of academic research has concluded that building portfolios in this manner leads to higher risk-adjusted returns than does "active" management, market timing, and traditional index investing.

One Relationship. A Team of Experts.

Our advisors are committed to you, to our philosophy, and to ensuring our clients get the right strategy, plan, and attention according to their unique needs. Our team of wealth management experts including, CERTIFIED FINANCIAL PLANNER™ professionals, investment advisors and strategists, estate planners, attorneys, and Certified Public Accountants, will collaborate with you and foster a relationship based on trust, service, and transparency. At Mercer Advisors, our commitment is to you.

New Tax Laws and Credits That May Impact Your Family

We have now had a full year with The Tax Cuts and Jobs Act, which enacted many significant changes for taxpayers. For families, especially those with children, it's important to know how these laws may impact your financial planning. As a working woman and a mother of two, I was pleased to learn that some of the new tax law changes will be helpful in planning expenses and future savings for my children. To help you think strategically about your tax planning, we have outlined some of these changes. Talk to your advisor about how these changes may affect your taxes.
