Security

FlexScore uses bank-grade security to protect your data. SHA-256 Encryption and 128-bit Secure Socket Layer (SSL) technology keeps your data private and secure. Also, Norton regularly scans our websites to make sure that our security measures are running at their full capacity and privacy policy is followed.

In addition to the electronic security, your data is also protected by some serious physical measures. Security personnel monitor the system 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Access to servers requires multiple levels of authentication, including biometrics (hand print scan) and identity authentication.

We need your online usernames and passwords for all financial accounts so that we can give you the best financial advice for your specific circumstances. Using our account aggregation service we are able to securely connect with your bank, credit card company, brokerage firm, retirement plan account, and the like. The numbers and information we need are then automatically downloaded into our advice engine daily. This way, you don't have to constantly update us, rather, we'll be able to update you!

The account aggregation technology we use has been used in our industry for many years. Also, identity thieves require information we don't ask for or need. For example, we don't ask for your social security number, telephone number, or your address. We also never ask for any personal financial account numbers. The level of information FlexScore needs is the same as what is found on the financial company websites you already use. At no time do we ask you for information that would be required for a hacker to steal your identity, such as your full name, financial account numbers, credit card numbers, billing address, etc.
